(Special to The Evening World.)
POLO GROUNDS, July 24.
New York fans took time by the forelock this afternoon and the Giants were given an uproarious welcome by the largest week-day crowd ever assembled in the Polo grounds. At 3 o'clock, an hour before the game, every seat in the grandstands had been grabbed up and a steady stream was pouring into the bleachers. In another half hour not a seat was left in the entire park and the overflow was turned into the grass. The playing field was protected from encroachment by a strong fence built especially for the Pittsburg series. Fully 20,000 people were in the park. It was a good-natured throng, however, and nobody kicked.

To make the occasion a real triumph home-coming for the Giants the rosters had engaged a brass band, the members of which were grouped on benches in front of the grand stand. Each of the New York players was given an ovation as he appeared on the field. Spike Shannon was also the target for a number of cheers as he appeared in a Pittsburg uniform. Spike grinned sheepishly and took to the cover of the bench. The crowd was such rare good nature that it went so far as to applaud Hans Wagner, the mainstay of the Pirates.

Pittsburg Fans Went Odd.
There was quite a patriotic spectacle as the Giants took the field for practice. The band played "The Star Spangled Banner," and the entire assemblage, including the players of both clubs, stood with bared heads, only to break into applause. The musicians turned the strains into "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Time to-Night."

There were hundreds of race track men in the stands, and shortly before the game the regular patrons were treated to the rather novel sight of lively betting on the result. A rumor spread over the stand that Wilts was to be the pitcher for the Giants, and for some reason which they did not explain the Pittsburg batters immediately demanded odds of 10 to 5, with New York as favorite.

The confidence of the New York seemed to disconcert the Pittsburg crowd, and from the lack of activity in practice the feeling apparently spread to the Pirates players. They were not nearly so gingerly as the Giants. After warming up two or three pitchers, McGraw decided to pin his faith on Wilts, and Wilts was the entry in the box for Pittsburg.

First Inning.
Thomas led off with a hot grounder which Bridwell grabbed and threw him out.

Second Inning.
Wagner made a very nice play of Devin's grounder to short. McGraw's play was thrown out by Wilts, and Bridwell was an easy victim of Abbey and Swain. NO RUNS.

Third Inning.
Dove easily threw out Wilts. Thomas again slammed a single into right field, and went to third as Abby slapped a safe one over Doyle's head. Bridwell got Wilts' grounder, and with a beautiful throw to right field, but was out stealing second base. Gilson to Wagner. NO RUNS.

Fourth Inning.
Devin threw out Clarke. Wagner again slammed a single into right field, and went to third as Abby slapped a safe one over Doyle's head. Bridwell got Wilts' grounder, and with a beautiful throw to right field, but was out stealing second base. Gilson to Wagner. NO RUNS.

PLOT IN GOULD CASE REVEALED BY CONFESSION

Julia Fleming's Admission of Attempted Bribery Corroborated. TESTIMONY HELD BACK.

Assistant District Attorney Hart, after a session with Miss Julia Fleming and her attorney that lasted the greater part of this morning, declared just before the hearing of the charges of subornation of perjury, in connection with the Gould divorce case, that he had obtained from her a full statement of her share in the alleged plot in which Mrs. Ben Teal, wife of one of the best known stage managers in America, is implicated.

Miss Fleming's confession was got from her after she had been allowed to stay in the Tombs without bail, while Mrs. Teal and Harry S. Mousley, the detective who was arrested with her, and like them, charged with manufacturing evidence against Frank J. Gould, were freed on bonds. Miss Fleming says that Mrs. Teal, whose confidante she was, introduced her to the detective, and after outlining a scheme to testify that Mr. Gould had been seen by Mabel MacCausland, the young dressmaker who revealed the plans, told her that there would be a lot of money in it for both of them.

Mr. Hart would not say what further details Miss Fleming went into in her statement, but he says it is of the highest importance.

Mrs. Teal Near Collapse.
The hearing of the charges against Mrs. Teal, Harry S. Mousley and Julia Fleming began at 2 o'clock this afternoon before Magistrate Corcoran. The crowd of witnesses and persons connected with the hearing was so great that court was held in one of the General Sessions courtrooms. Instead of the limited space in the police court. It is charged that the three were in a conspiracy to manufacture evidence against Frank Gould.

Mrs. Teal appeared to be on the verge of collapse when, with her husband and two women friends, she reached the Criminal Courts Building in a taxicab and alighted on a center street side. She wore a dark blue dress and was veiled. As she stepped to the sidewalk she reeled as if from weakness, and one of the women who accompanied her supported her on one side and, with her husband on the other, she was half-dragged into the building.

She was taken to the office of Assistant District Attorney Hart, who has charge of the prosecution. A few minutes later Frank Gould, who is reported to have been subpoenaed by the defense, arrived with Cornelius J. Sullivan, his attorney, and took a seat in the rear of the courtroom. Before the proceedings began he sat, with a broad-brimmed hat tilted well forward over his eyes, apparently in the hope of escaping recognition.

Mrs. Teal's counsel, Edward Carpel, addressed the Court with a request that large and more comfortable quarters be sought for the hearing, so that the danger of collapse to his client would be lessened.

When Mr. Carpel had finished his request Mr. Hart said:

"Your Honor, the confession made to me to-day by Mrs. Julia Fleming and the affidavit of Blanche Hale, corroborated by that of Miss MacCausland, will not be presented before you. I feel that I have enough evidence to hold the prisoners, and I will not present other matters until the trial."

Miss Fleming knows, according to the prosecuting officials, all the details of the alleged plot to produce testimony involving Frank Gould in a compromising situation with an actress, and the prosecution, it is known, has relied on inducing her to become its most valuable witness.

She has said that she was deeply hurt at the manner in which her friends have allowed her to remain unbailed while they have been at liberty since a few hours after their arrest.

BARBARA RIEG WAS SUMMONED TO MEET DEATH

Message Changed Park Victim's Intention to Remain at Home. Policeman Shellard Held for Coroner Despite His Comrades' Efforts.

In an effort to bolster up his assertion that Barbara Rieg, the victim of the Irving Square Park shelter house mystery, killed herself because he refused her attentions, Policeman David Shellard produced to-day a letter he says he received from the girl two months ago. The epistle indicates that Barbara Rieg was fully aware that Shellard was a married man and that their relations were more than casual.

Shellard was arraigned in New Jersey Avenue Court to-day and held without bail for the coroner. Previously he had been questioned at Brooklyn Headquarters and had produced the letter. In the police court Shellard was made to rest on a big chair in a private office while his venerable precinct commander, Capt. Wormell, was making out the complaint. Shellard is a fine physical type more than six feet tall, straight, slim and muscular, and with handsome features. It is said to be that he was a policeman who might easily impress shopgirls.

Capt. Wormell's complaint did not satisfy Magistrate Furlong when it was presented. It was loosely drawn, as though the Captain still clung to his belief that Barbara Rieg committed suicide and then hid the revolver.

"This complaint," said the Magistrate, "is defective. The prisoner could be released in an hour, on a writ, if I should accept it. It is all on information and belief. Make out the regular form of complaint, charging this man with wilful murder."

Capt. Wormell complied. Shellard had nothing to say in court and the commitment proceedings were brief.

Swears Innocence, Holding Baby.
Shellard's pretty young wife and his mother visited him in the prison of the New Jersey Avenue Court after his commitment to-day. His wife carried her baby in her arms and Shellard broke down completely when he saw them.

Mrs. Shellard kissed her husband through the bars of the cell and the mother also touched her lips to his face. Then Shellard was allowed to hold the baby for a moment. The little one laughed and cooed contentedly.

Suddenly taking the baby from her husband's arms, Mrs. Shellard stepped back. She looked Shellard in the eyes and he returned her gaze without flinching.

"Dave," she said, "did you kill that girl?"

"No," he answered, earnestly. "So help me God, I never harmed her."

"Did she kill herself?" persisted the wife.

"Yes, she did," answered Shellard, dropping his eyes under the steady gaze. Mrs. Shellard announced at the conclusion of her visit that she will stand by her husband. She says he was kind and loving at home and she believes his assertion that the girl killed herself because of his refusal to entertain her advances.

Summons to Her Death.
Inquiry among Barbara's shopmates to-day establishes that she deceived her mother when she said she was going to a party Monday night. Just before leaving the shop for home she told some of her friends that she would remain in the house that evening, unless she received a certain message.

This message reached her, undoubtedly. It was an appointment to meet Policeman Shellard. He says she did not appear at Irving Square Park until 1 o'clock in the morning. Inquiries are on foot to confirm an impression that she went to the park directly from her home and was in there five or six hours with the policeman, instead of one hour.

This is the letter Policeman Shellard has produced to substantiate his claim that the girl was infatuated with him and pursued him with her attentions:

"Brooklyn, N. Y., May 20, 1908.

"Friend Dave—Pardon me for taking the liberty of writing to you, hoping not to offend you, by any means. By the way, I hear you and Teddy are

FAR WEST RUNS GREAT RACE AT BRIGHTON BEACH

BY VINCENT TREANOR.
BRIGHTON BEACH RACE TRACK, July 24.—Far West ran a great race in winning the handicap here this afternoon. Gilbert lay third all the way to the stretch and then brought Far West through on the rail to a comparatively easy victory. Lally finished with a great rush from fourth place and all but caught Gilbert, on Far West, napping.

Question Mark, which looked almost a sure winner at the stretch turn, was third. Tony Bonero did most of the early pace-making, having a two-length lead in the run to the stretch. He quit here very badly, however, when Question Mark got to him, and finished in the rack.

Scratches Spoil First Race.
Far West was scratched from the original field of eight in the opening race, a six furlong dash for non-winners during the season. Saracinesca was an odds-on choice, and he certainly looked a good thing on any form. He led all the way and never was in trouble. Aster D'O'r, in a bad pocket all through the back stretch, however, got through until the stretch was reached, when he came on and finished second in front of Loudoun Light. Trouvere, played for a good time, finished third.

Arasee Wins Second.
Arasee was the second odds-on choice to win. He took the lead at the start and just galloped in front all the way. George C. Hall ran second all the way and was just as easily second as Arasee was the winner. Comedienne led on to third place throughout. The rest of the race was a matter of time. The Pincin had some early speed, but after they rounded the far turn Fashion Plate turned to the front with Personal laposed on him. They rounded the stretch turn all in a bunch, with Fashion Plate still in the lead and Torbellino coming like a streak on the outside. He caught Fashion Plate a dozen strides from the finish and seemed to go past the judges a neck in front of Fashion Plate. Personal was in the race in a close quarter and was in difficulty, as Dander lamed on her side. He, however, made Personal last long enough to finish in the third place. The judges, however, hung up the numbers, and what they say is final.

Dorando, Who Collapsed 200 Yards From Finish and Was Lifted Over Line, Disqualified on American's Objection.

BRITISH TRACK OFFICIALS HELP ITALIAN TO FINISH.

Uncle Sam's Athletes Finish in First, Third and Fourth Place in Classic Event—Longboat, Canadian, Quits Race at End of Twenty Miles.

(By Cable from the Associated Press.)
LONDON, July 24.—The American protest against Dorando for receiving assistance at the finish of the Marathon has been upheld. This makes John F. Hayes, Irish-American A. C., the winner of this world-famous event.

Dorando collapsed two hundred yards from the finish. He struggled to his feet and tried to cover the remaining distance, but was soon down again. He could not continue. His collapse was complete and officials practically carried him to the finish.

Hayes came in second without any assistance whatever.

WHAT WE WON TO-DAY.
Marathon Race—John F. Hayes, Irish-American A. C., first, five points; Joseph Forshaw, Missouri Athletic Club (St. Louis), third, one point. Total gain for America to-day, 6 points.

Pole Vault—A. C. Gilbert, Yale, and E. T. Cooke, Cornell, tied for first and second, four points each. Clark S. Jacobs, University of Chicago, tied for third place with two others, 1-3 point.

Total gain for America to-day, 14-1-3 points.

race, has protested against John F. Hayes, Irish-American A. C., who finished second. No grounds for this protest have yet been given out.

Heffernan protested against Hayes on the ground that Hayes had been assisted after coming into the Stadium.

No other person except Heffernan, who had not entered the Stadium when Hayes finished, could be found to support this statement. J. E. Sullivan, the American commissioner, protested to Lord Desborough, chairman of the British Olympic Association.

On the Heffernan protest the British Olympic Association, for the first time since the opening of the games, asked the Americans into conference. This Mr. Sullivan declined, and the Americans asked Lord Desborough to take down the Italian flag until the committee had passed on their protest. They said it was an insult to the American flag to have it below the emblem of Italy under the circumstances.

Mr. Sullivan told Lord Desborough the Englishmen must settle this matter among themselves, the Americans were willing to abide by the decision of the 10,000 people in the Stadium. "Now the world can see what the boasted British fair play is," said Mr. Sullivan, in conclusion.

How the Race Was Run.
It was just 2:38 London time (3:38 New York time) when word was given the fifty-five athletes, who were lined up in lines on the green sward in front of Windsor Castle, that started them on their long journey.

Slough, and Jack of the United Kingdom, jumped to the front at the start and at eight minutes before three were leading the others by thirty yards. For the next two miles first one Englishman and then another took the lead.

At the ninth mile, which was reached fifty-two minutes after the start, Lord of England was winning. Christ of United Kingdom and Heffernan, of South Africa, were third. At Uxbridge, Jack, who had set the early pace, had enough and dropped out.

At the tenth mile, Price, of United Kingdom, was one minute ahead of Lord Hayes, Weldon and Morrissey, of the American team, were improving their positions. A. E. Ryan, Twinning, the Carlisle Indian, and Forshaw were some distance back.

At Harrow, Heffernan, the South African runner, who finished third in the Marathon

Billions of Jersey's Mosquitoes Fly to New York.
Scientists are at a loss to account for the visitation of the "busy workers."
One explanation is that some "wit" had a "Mosquito Wanted" advertisement printed.
While it is true that The World has printed 10,000 separate advertisements so far this week—1,500 more than the Herald—a close examination shows that, although Positions, Services, Homes, Investments, Bargains, &c., have been offered in great variety, no "Mosquito Wanted" ad. has been found, and the mystery remains.
